

The user has clicked the log off button but the user is still on the add product interface. This is as expected.

If the system functions correctly, if the user clicks the no button, then the pop up window should close and the user should stay on the current interface.

When the user clicks the log Off button, the system presents The user with this pop up window

If the system functions correctly, if the user clicks the 'Yes' option, the user should be taken to the log in interface.
